of a new world, a wider and a greater Rome. Julius Caesar faced the chaos of the time without despair. If the nobles were corrupt, he knew from his officers and legionaries the stern virtues that were left in the race.¹ He set himself at first to carry measures securing better government, while preserving the constitution. The irreconcilable spirit of the nobles, determined to allow no reform whatever, made this impossible. In despite of them the great forces of the time, discerned and guided by his genius, carried him on to higher and higher power, and at last he was able to pass measures, the 'Julian

That question mark in the margin is really doing it for me! 😄
