

Forum Restructuring & Refiling of Threads - General Discussion Renamed to Uncategorized Discussion

Hi Everyone, You may notice that there are a few changes in the forum structure...and also the drop-down menus.

Most notable is that "General Discussion" has been renamed to "Uncategorized Discussion (General)". This means that only posts on topics which do not already have existing categories should go into the "Uncategorized Discussion".

Here is the new description:

This discussion sub-forum covers anything which doesn't fit within our existing Epicurean philosophy sub-forum categories. Please double-check if your post topic falls into an existing category. For help finding the correct category visit our short-cuts page. Or you can click here to return to the full forum list. Newer members: if you are unsure of where to post, you can ask where to post in your welcome thread (or send a private message to a moderator or admin). (P.S. We are currently working to file earlier general posts into their correct locations).

I'll be doing a bit more work soon on the "short-cuts" page, and that will help everyone with locating where exactly to post.

fyi - there is a lot of old but good stuff that had previously been posted under "General Discussion" (now labeled "Uncategorized Discussion") that will need to be moved over to the correct categories, and it will take a while to do so. And oddly enough, over the last several years we have basically ended up with two forums: the "general discussion" forum and the categorized sub-forums). There are many threads which duplicate the same discussion topics and questions (2 or more times!) that were posted in "general discussion" even though there are existing categories of sub-forums.

Thank you everyone for your understanding and help in posting content in relevant locations.

And if you have any questions, please ask! Thanks! 😊
