When I "came out" as an atheist, I found out that the only thing I had in common with members of my pagan "tribe" was that we had the same dogma. Taking that away, I lost most of my friends. But I think it might have been a cult. The only thing I am clear on right now is I don't believe in the supernatural. No gods. No magic. No life after death. No spirits and demons. Everything I have studied up to this point assumed the existence of the supernatural. So I find myself starting from scratch. Including my social life.
