

The Closing Paragraph of the Letter to Menoecus

Post by “Kalosyni” of August 6, 2025 at 1:46 PM

Quote from Don

I still maintain that ἐν ἀθανάτοις ἀγαθοῖς is "among undying goods" means "among undying pleasures" as in good=pleasure.

I am curious if it is the same word for "goods" that Aristotle uses when he talks about instrumental, intrinsic, and external "goods"?