The only thing that certainly lies ahead of us is death, and the only thing we can do to live our lives successfully is to fill them with as much pleasure and as little pain as possible.

That line reflects so much of what I've been pondering recently. Many here already know that I closed my FB account a while ago. Frankly, I have not looked back. I'm already on MInds.com and Gab.ai and can be found there. (look for innereric) But I am not convinced they are a great deal better than FB other than their free speech stance and not manipulating what one sees.....so far. That said, all these social networks are potential places from which to invite interested people here. That is likely their best use.

For in-depth study of Epicurean Philosophy, this platform is much more suitable. So I would welcome more people here and will try to offer more input as it grows.
