

My Epicurean plans for 2018

I'm particularly interested in (3). I don't like to spend much time on social media. It is useful to a degree but I can't think of it as anything other than virtual, as opposed to real. I prefer interacting in person.

I'm from Los Angeles and I recently noticed that there is a Stoics meetup in LA, which is relatively new as far as I can tell. I applaud the idea of people taking interest in philosophy as a way of life, outside of the closed world of academia, but we need an alternative to the Stoics and all the vague newagey "spiritual" organisations you often find in California.

What strategy do you have in mind to start developing Epicurean communities outside the internet? How would you use this website to accomplish this?
