Hania tells me:

In general I am interested in ancient hedonism. My BA thesis focused on Cyrenaics while my MA thesis was mainly about Epicurus' philosophical therapy. I am now researching more contemporary interpretations of hedonims while working on my PhD in Philosophy (I am an Europe based researcher). However, my current work is still based on the ancient source of that school of ethics, with emphasis on epicureanism (including Lucretius).

I hope your website/forum will provide new insight and be a good way to connect with others interested in Epicurus' school of thought.
