Great collection of quotes @Eikadistes !

I feel like the main focus right now should be on actually connecting personal relationships. I'm really trying to convert my father into really liking Epicurean philosophy as a great remedy which fills you with joy and loaned him the Emily Austin book to read.

Always remember that Epicurus himself just started by meeting a few people like Metrodorus and interacting with his family and brothers and converting them to his cause.

In all this talk about trying to convert the masses don't forget that interpersonal conversion between friends co-workers or family is probably the main driving factor.

And above all else attest to the wonders that Epicurean philosophy does to bring joy to the soul, Christians entice people with heaven and we need to entice people by showing how our philosophy leads to happiness. My father mainly got interested after I had tested how much Epicurean philosophy filled me with gratitude for what I had.
