Stas tells us:

Hi! My name is Stanislav, and I live in Crimea, which is either in Ukraine or in Russia, depending on your political views. I am not very fluent in English, so I use online translators.

I am interested in philosophical teachings that are compatible with atheism and a modern scientific worldview. However, I am also looking for teachings that can be practically useful in everyday life. Unfortunately, modern philosophical systems such as existentialism, analytical philosophy, or postmodernism tend to be too abstract and have limited practical applications. Therefore, I am interested in the materialist philosophers of the past, such as Epicurus. Unfortunately, most of his works were destroyed by Christians and have not survived to this day. Your website can help us reconstruct Epicurean philosophy based on the few fragments that have survived.
