Buck23 tells us:

Hello Cassius!

I live in the US, and have been an on-and-off listener of "The Lucretius Today" podcast for a while. That said, I'm a beginner on the journey to get to know Epicurus and his philosophy. But, so far, I find much resonance with the way I live and would like to live. I'm especially grateful for the commentary found in the podcast and the Epicureanfriends.com website regarding relevant definitions of terms, as well as context. Also, the side by side translations provided on the website is an amazing resource! (But, I'm also curious about what printed version may be the best for a beginner. Didn't find that yet on the website yet -- and I'd be grateful to hear your own recommendation(s)!

I also have had a lifelong love and admiration of Ancient Greek culture -- primarily focusing on Greek Myths and the extant tragedies. (Though I'm a bit rusty on the latter!). Career-wise, I'm winding down more than 45 years of IT -- most recently in Computer Administration and Development, and a focus on Data Integrity.

Last -- thanks so much for sharing your time and knowledge in so accessible a way! I look forward to diving deeper and deeper!

All the best,
