

The Kind of Ring I'd Like to See

Post by "Cassius" of August 5, 2019 at 3:09 PM

For me personally it's kind of a tough question. No way I could eat an animal I raised, and I realize there's no real difference between the ones I've raised and the ones I haven't. Then you have issues like factory farming that I also find repulsive. Then you have to think about how a lot of this is cultural and apparently they eat dogs in the far east without any issues. On the other hand I am not, have never been, and probably never could be a vegetarian.

To me this is a good reminder about how values and even senses of pleasure are not world-wide and absolutely contextual. No god, prime mover, or any other supernatural or natural force programmed everybody the same way.