

Marriage & children seem less pleasurable today: financial worry, relational problems, high rates of divorce. Are they worth the pain (tarakhē τάραχή) they entail?

I have a feeling that some are going to say that you might be taking a more "mercenary" or "economic man" approach than is warranted by the big picture of nature. Or that your post undervalues the pleasure that your artist friends have helped inject into these relationships - but which may in fact exist regardless of their efforts.

But i'd like to see what others say before I comment further. 😊
