

Living The Hobo Life?

Post by “brett” of January 8, 2018 at 11:02 PM

hi all,

I ran across this article a while ago. While much of it seemed fairly accurate(to my novice eyes at least), I was immediately struck by how 'wrong' it seemed to say that Epicureanism leads to the hobo life.

https://philosophynow.org/issues/98/Epic...m_The_Hobo_Test

If I'm learning anything, it's that pleasure is the highest good and necessary and natural desires (housing being one) are important to ensuring the future happy state.

Mr. Dougall seems to have created caricature of Epicureanism that comes off a bit insulting for it's naivete.

Thoughts?

Brett