I vote for checkmarks

I'd also be interested in knowing whether members adopted the philosophy after reading about it (and if so, which reading)-- or if while reading, they recognized Epicurus had the same philosophy as them, which is what happened to me.

Because of the unappealing and inaccurate way EP is written about these days, when I was younger I had dismissed it as wrong. Never realized Epicurus was being misinterpreted until I finally read the core texts myself and thought whoaa! This brilliant guy agrees with me [!!!!]! And he's done much more with it, more pieces, made it airtight! There's not a single hole in it, and now I understand exactly why the other philosophies never worked for me. I'm not alone after all!
