

The Hedonistic Calculus - explained through an equation

Post by "Charles" of November 4, 2019 at 10:52 AM

Good points all around. However I think that duration as a variable would only be applicable if the desire you chose to fulfill is natural, but unnecessary. Though we aren't ones for hypothetical situations, I can see this as a more useful tool for determining the priorities of your disposable income.

For example: should you buy a nice down pillow that's better than the cushioned rock beside your headboard? Or should you buy a cheap box of wine at Target after an excruciating week?