

Researchers Prove Altruism Begins In Infancy- is this an anticipation?

Post by “Lee” of February 18, 2020 at 10:12 AM

Thanks for clarifying this point Elayne. I see the distinction and the need to resolve our behavior back to the experience of pleasure as the primary principal.

I believe I read somewhere (maybe De Witt's book) how Epicurus taught that giving up one's life for a friend could be justified/rationalized because living with the pain of choosing one's life over that of a friend was more painful than death.