

Free Will and the Recognition of Pleasure, or the Role of Desire

Post by “Charles” of April 22, 2020 at 7:51 AM

Good point Godfrey but that sort of brings us towards the arguments of those who say that free will does indeed exist, but not in the pursuance of pleasure. According to them, free will can only be exercised when you will yourself out of desire, say to uphold duty or maintain virtue.

It's both a double standard and very convenient.