

Episode Seventeen - All Things Are Not Made of Fire, And Heraclitus Was A Fool

Post by "Cassius" of April 27, 2020 at 10:46 AM

In this week's episode we are talking about Heraclitus and the error of thinking that all things are made of fire. This probably relates as well to the issue of the Stoics thinking that everything is "divine fire."

This text contains the memorable line:

Quote

For fools laud and love all things more which they can descry hidden beneath twisted sayings, and they set up for true what can tickle the ear with a pretty sound and is tricked out with a smart ring.

If anyone has particular thoughts to be sure we cover in discussing this text, please be sure to post them so they can be incorporated into the episode.