

Episode Twenty-Nine - The Earth As Allegorical Mother of All

Post by "Cassius" of August 2, 2020 at 8:06 PM

This last discussion on differentiating an Epicurean society from an atheist church is related to the discussion we had to be about the role of philosophy. I think Godfrey is right that probably as a percentage, most of the atheist churches are essentially "humanist" which is a long and separate discussion but is not Epicurean.

Isn't there a bible verse to the effect that "not everyone who says the name Jesus goes to heaven?" 😊

I would say "not everyone who denies a supernatural creator, who says he pursues pleasure, is an Epicurean."

There's a lot more to it, as Godfrey indicates.