

Thoughts on Reverence, Awe, and Epicurean Piety

Post by “Don” of October 29, 2020 at 7:47 AM

That's an interesting take, Godfrey , and one I think I'm in agreement with for the most part... with a couple caveats and addenda:

- Unfortunately, I think you'll still find some people imagining their God anthropomorphically. 😞
- I'd like to read more about the generative force from you. Can you extend those remarks? Are you saying we could call that generative force Venus then like Lucretius?
- Are you also saying we could adapt other religions' practices to our needs by changing the mental content? Epicurus only had the Greek cultural practices and rituals. We're aware of more cultures now and were maybe born into other religions (not me - mainstream evangelicalism here).