One positive way to state this is that we believe that our values should be founded on The Study of NATURE, while other belief systems have shaky foundations. Might be worth a YouTube video in the future, I've always felt that E's project is to reconcile us with nature, and I think many atheists / humanists would benefit from learning new ways to affirm their values in positive terms as founded on "the study of nature" rather than in negative terms as a reaction against religious lies, which puts them at a disadvantage rhetorically.
