This video is the best information I have found on the theory of consciousness that Roger Penrose has been working on. It is a difficult lecture, but gets better as it goes along, and the second half is more biology than physics. The Q and A session at the end is excellent.

There is some pretty solid science here, with successful experimentation. If you choose to watch it and can't stand the math, jump ahead to the 40min mark. I would like to watch it again before I make suggestions on how the theory may relate to anticipations, "images" of the gods, and to epistemology in general, but I think there is something important here:
