

A Graphical Representation of Two Versions of "Absence of Pain"

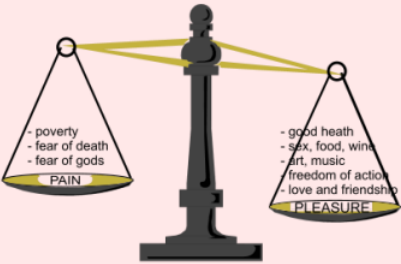

Post by "Cassius" of February 19, 2018 at 9:14 AM

Discussion of the graphical representation of two versions of "Absence of Pain"

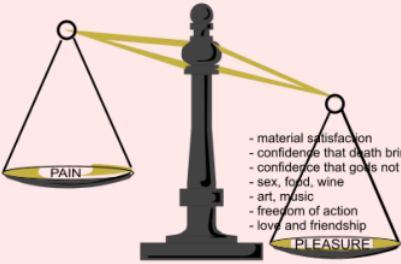

TWO WAYS OF STATING THE GOAL OF LIFE: WHICH ONE DID EPICURUS MEAN?

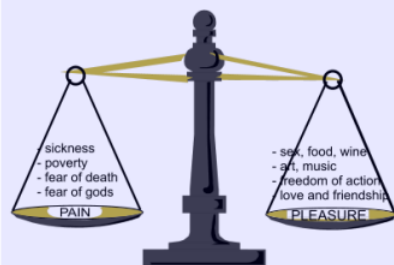

1 - Pleasures and Pains Roughly equal.

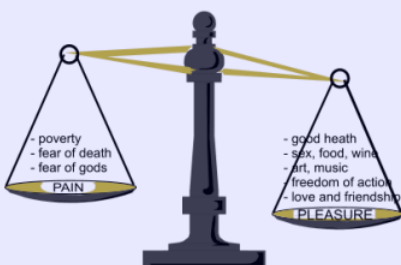

2. Pleasures increasing in number,
Pains decreasing in number.

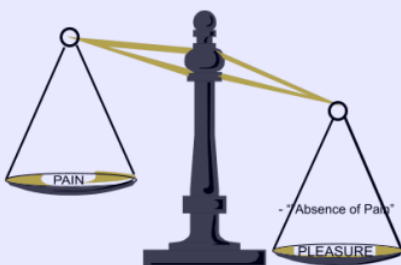

3. The goal: At the limit there is nothing but the accumulated Pleasures, with no Pains remaining.

1 - Pleasure and Pain Roughly equal.

2. Pleasure increasing, Pain decreasing.

3. The goal: At the limit something new called "Absence of Pain" has replaced the mental and physical pleasures that were previously accumulating.

Post by "Cassius" of February 19, 2018 at 9:35 PM

Torquatus, from "On Ends" Book 1:

"The truth of the position that pleasure is the ultimate good will most readily appear from the following illustration. Let us imagine a man living in the continuous enjoyment of numerous and vivid pleasures alike of body and of mind, undisturbed either by the presence or by the prospect of pain. What possible state of existence could we describe as being more excellent or more desirable? One so situated must possess in the first place a strength of mind that is proof against all fear of death or of pain. He will know that death means complete unconsciousness, and that pain is generally light if long and short if strong, so that its intensity is compensated by brief duration and its continuance by diminishing severity. Let such a man moreover have no dread of any supernatural power; let him never suffer the pleasures of the past to fade away, but constantly renew their enjoyment in recollection, and his lot will be one which will not admit of further improvement."