

Episode 272 - TD02 - Is Death An Evil?

Post by "Cassius" of March 12, 2025 at 7:08 AM

Welcome to Episode 272 of Lucretius Today. This is a podcast dedicated to the poet Lucretius, who wrote "On The Nature of Things," the most complete presentation of Epicurean philosophy left to us from the ancient world.

Each week we walk you through the Epicurean texts, and we discuss how Epicurean philosophy can apply to you today. If you find the Epicurean worldview attractive, we invite you to join us in the study of Epicurus at EpicureanFriends.com, where we discuss this and all of our podcast episodes.

This week we continue our series covering Cicero's "Tusculan Disputations" from an Epicurean viewpoint. This series addresses five of the greatest questions in philosophy, with Cicero speaking for the majority and Epicurus the main opponent:

- 1. Is Death An Evil? (Cicero says no and Epicurus says no, but for very different reasons)
- 2. Is Pain An Evil? (Cicero says no, Epicurus says yes)
- 3. Does the Wise Man Experience Grief and Fear? (Cicero says no, Epicurus says yes)
- 4. Does the Wise Man Experience Joy and Desire? (Cicero says no, Epicurus says yes)
- 5. Is Virtue Sufficient For A Happy Life? (Cicero says yes, Epicurus says no)

As we found in Cicero's "On Ends" and "On The Nature of the Gods," Cicero treated Epicurean Philosophy as a major contender in the battle between the philosophies, and in discussing this conflict and explaining Epicurus' answers to these questions, we will deepen our understanding of Epicurus and how he compares to the other major schools.

These week we turn our attention further to "Is Death An Evil," and we will read and discuss Sections V through IX where the question is framed and the discussion begins:

In these sections, the student raises to the teacher the proposition: "To me death seems to be an evil.

- Cicero first argues that this means that everyone is miserable, because everyone dies.
- Cicero asks his student if he believes the stories about monsters in the underworld, and the student says of course he does not.

- Cicero then argues the Epicurean position (without crediting Epicurus for it), that when we are dead we no longer exist.
- Cicero argues that principles of logic require that a thing asserted either be true or false.
- The student retreats to the position that life is made miserable by realizing that we must die.
- Cicero tells the student that if this is so, then death delivers us from a miserable life.
- Cicero cites Epicharmus, who said that "I would not die, but even so I am not concerned that I will be dead."
- The student hears this but challenges Cicero to prove that anticipating death is not miserable. Cicero says he will prove that this is so by showing that death is not only not evil, but a good.
- Cicero goes on to explain that death is the departure of the soul from the body.

We'll be reading from the Charles Yonge edition.

Here is a link to our discussion guide: Epicurean Views Of Tusculan Disputations

Our thread here at the forum specifically dedicated to Tusculan Disputations is here.

For purposes of planning ahead, this series will be followed by a series on the Epicurean-relevant material in Cicero's "Academic Questions." A thread devoted to that series where you can make comments on what aspects of "Academic Questions" to include is here.

[media]<https://www.spreaker.com/episode/64945674/media>

Post by "Cassius" of March 17, 2025 at 9:26 PM

Episode 272 of the Lucretius Today Podcast is now available. Today's episode is entitled: "Is Death An Evil?" as we proceed into part one of Tusculan Disputations

[media]<https://www.spreaker.com/episode/64945674/media>

Post by "Bryan" of March 18, 2025 at 3:31 PM

Wow! Excellent idea for the reading! In all the versions I've seen lately that read the T.D., I have not heard a version that used two voices. Kalosyni and Joshua, you both really did a superb job. THANK YOU!

Post by "Don" of March 19, 2025 at 6:23 PM

Brilliant having the dramatic reading. Much easier to follow the text.

Post by "Joshua" of March 30, 2025 at 4:48 PM

Quote from Seneca, Letters to Lucilius, Letter 24

I may become a poor man; I shall then be one among many. I may be exiled; I shall then regard myself as born in the place to which I shall be sent. They may put me in chains. What then? Am I free from bonds now? Behold this clogging burden of a body, to which nature has fettered me! "I shall die," you say; you mean to say "I shall cease to run the risk of sickness; I shall cease to run the risk of imprisonment; I shall cease to run the risk of death." 18. I am not so foolish as to go through at this juncture the arguments which Epicurus harps upon, and say that the terrors of the world below are idle,—that Ixion does not whirl round on his wheel, that Sisyphus does not shoulder his stone uphill, that a man's entrails cannot be restored and devoured every day;[8] no one is so childish as to fear Cerberus, or the shadows, or the spectral garb of those who are held together by naught but their unfleshed bones. Death either annihilates us or strips us bare. If we are then released, there remains the better part, after the burden has been withdrawn; if we are annihilated, nothing remains; good and bad are alike removed.